To this must be added the depressing influence resultant from the Many Influences. Numerous influences have combined to militate against high dividends. The prices of equipment, supplies, and labor have steadily increased over a considerable period of years, and these increases have been such as to offset the effect of growth of traffic, and precluded the decrease in the handling of

The public has demanded a higher standard of freight and passenger service. But large depots cannot be maintained as cheaply as can small ones; the upkeep of trackage over which fast trains are run is greater than that over which slow ones move. The railroad officials acknowledge that improvements tending to safety and good service should be made, but they point to the fact that such improvements do not yield a proportionate return, and contend that they should be allowed higher that they should be al The public has demanded a higher yield a proportionate return, and con-tend that they should be allowed higher rates.

Congress Was Slow.

Just now the work of physical valuation of the railroads of the country is to be made. Congress dickered long bers will be launched by the Retail over the item of expenditure with over the item of expenditure, which its moving into its new quarters in the would have to be made from the Star building this week and the formal Treasury of the country. W. J. Wilgus, opening Wednesday evening. President Andrews says the association will in a New York engineer, has just coma New York engineer, has just completed a physical valuation of the Lehigh Valley railroad, in connection with testimony which was required by the Interstate Commerce Commission n the anthracite rate investigation. He declares that to value the 250,000 miles of railroad in the United States will cost the companies themselves $125,-

This is a burden which the roads have not yet assumed. Many of them now contend that they cannot make improvements, must reduce dividends, and make other curtailments because and make other curtailments because their returns are not sufficient to justify such outlays. Each road must add to is already heavy burden, according to Mr. Wilgus, $100 per mile for physical valuation. This would mean an outlay of $25,000,000 as the expenditure of the roads for their own work. They must make the valuation in order to determine that they are being properly assessed.
